Data-driven CO₂ surface fluxes (bottom) are fed into the NASA GEOS model, which transports their signal through the atmosphere (middle).

When applying the empirical sink presented here, GEOS simulations have comparable skill to flux inversion systems and can be produced in real time at high resolution.

Acknowledgements: The TRENDY and GCP projects, F. Chevallier, A. Jacobson, and C. Rödenbeck, NASA GSFC SVS & the NASA CMS project.